Basic information

Full Name of Journal:

JOURNAL OF CONTEMPORARY ADMINISTRATION (RAC – REVISTA DE ADMINISTRAÇÃO CONTEMPORÂNEA)

Editor in Chief

Wesley Mendes-Da-Silva (Fundação Getúlio Vargas, Escola de Administração de Empresas de São Paulo, FGV-EAESP, São Paulo, SP, Brasil, rac.wesley.mendes@gmail.com)

Aims:

RAC publishes articles on theoretical development and theoretical-empirical work in the area of Administration and Accounting Sciences. Different theoretical and methodological perspectives in topics' treatment are acceptable, as long as they are consistent and relevant to the development of the area (articles based on monocase studies will be accepted as long as they are about highly representative organizations in their areas of activity or in case of significant contribution for knowledge). Although RAC includes articles that bring contributions to managerial practice, it keeps place dedicated to practice in market environment, while publishes content to the academic community. In this way, works that focuses on the application of managerial models and tools in organizations are also accepted. Submitted papers should address contemporary issues of regional importance, aim to inform debate and policy making, and be of international relevance. Therefore, manuscripts focusing on regional issues are welcome if they suggest research strategies or offer valuable lessons more generally. Manuscripts that reveal the need for more scientific research are also welcome. Finally, besides scientific articles, RAC publishes technological articles, tutorial articles and teaching cases for the reflection of the community.

Target Public: The target audience consists mainly of professionals and students, in parallel, managers of public, private and third sector organizations interested in the dialogue and innovation of Administration and Accounting Sciences.

Periodic Interval:
